REDMEN'S MINSTREL IS BIG ATTRACTION AT OPERA HOUSE

Opera House Is Expected To Be Filled At Home Talent Show Given For Benefit of the Poor of the City Mission.

For several weeks members of the local order of Red Men have been rehearsing a minstrel show which will be given at the Washington Opera House tonight and tomorrow night for the benefit of the poor of the City Mission. Those who have looked upon these rehearsals report that the entertainment is going to be far above the ordinary in many respects. The show is brought out by Mr. H. C. Curran who on more than one occasion has demonstrated his ability as a director.

The sale of tickets has been very encouraging and a full house is expected this evening. These tickets have sold readily not only because of the promised worth of the entertainment but because of the good cause to which the money made shall be contributed. The City Mission is the city's one institution for the assistance of the destitute and through its various activities has exerted an influence for good in this immediate vicinity that can never be estimated.

Tickets may yet be obtained from members of the Red Men's order or at Shafer & Watkins' paint store where seat reservations are being made. To enjoy an evening of laughter and to help a most worthy cause, buy a ticket now for the Red Men's Minstrel either tonight or tomorrow night.

W. F. STEELE IS CANDIDATE FOR TAX COMMISSIONER

Popular Local Man Enters Race For Important Office Selecting Efficient Deputies.

The formal announcement of Mr. W. F. Steele as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for County Tax Commissioner appears in the proper column of the Public Ledger this afternoon. Mr. Steele recently made a statement to the Democratic voters through this medium in which he named as his deputies, if successful in the primary race, Mrs. Robert Bouldin and Mr. Frank Guilfoyle.

Mr. Steele and both of his deputies are well and favorably known throughout Mason county and any comment upon them personally would be useless. Their efficiency should also be thoroughly known. Mr. Steele has spent the greater part of his life in business that equips him in knowledge for the very important office to which he aspires while both of his deputies are likewise very efficient. This trio goes before the Democrats of Mason county asking their support and promising the best possible service if selected.

Walter Thomas, formerly with McIlvain, Knox & Diener, will reopen the repair shop of the late John O'Mahoney in Traxel's alley, where he will do packing, repairing and moving of furniture.

NORMAL SCHOOL FOR MAYSVILLE IS NOW ASSURED

Mason County Board of Education Joins City Board in Financing Special Normal Course for Teachers in Maysville.

Maysville is now assured of a Normal School at the Maysville High School during the coming summer if there are enough teachers in the city and county who will attend the free school to make it worth the effort. The Mason County Board of Education in its first regular meeting this morning appropriated the sum of $300 toward the financing of the school which with the $200 appropriated by the City Board of Education makes the financial success of the school assured.

This school will be conducted in the Maysville High School and Messrs. C. E. Everett, W. J. Caplinger and H. S. Calkins will be the instructors for a period of five weeks. Tuition will be free to Maysville and Mason county teachers but teachers coming from other counties will be expected to pay a nominal tuition.

A large delegation of Orangeburg citizens appeared before the Board of Education today petitioning the board to establish a High School at Orangeburg. These men proposed the organization of a Development company which will set stock for enough money to erect an up-to-date building with the understanding that the county board will rent the building at a stipulated rate until the county thus pays for it. This question was discussed at length and was taken under advisement. The board will probably answer the Orangeburg folks by their May meeting.

The school levy for the approaching year was fixed at 35 cents on the one hundred dollars of taxable property, the same figure at which it was placed for this year.

A CARD FROM FARMERS & PLANTERS TOBACCO WHSE. CO.

During the season just closed, we sold at our two houses, 4,749,900 pounds, for the sum of $782,778.47, or an average of $16.22, per hundred, for the entire season.

We beg to thank all of our customers for the generous patronage accorded us.

Our organization for the next season will be the same as for the past one, with little exception our auctioneer, Mr. Best, has contracted to return, and our Mr. Powers will be on hand, as usual, and Mr. C. C. Calvert will continue in charge of the office. We caution the growers to be more careful than ever in the selection of the tobacco land, this spring, as it costs the same to cultivate and handle a common crop as it does a good crop. Careful handling and stripping will continue to command splendid remuneration.

Again thanking our friends and assuring our very heartiest co-operation in the future, we are, Very gratefully, FARMERS & PLANTERS TOBACCO WAREHOUSE COMPANY.

COUNTY COURT.

In the Mason County Court today the following business was transacted:

"Once to Every Woman" featuring Dorothy Phillips and directed by Allen Holubar. This same production is booked for an early appearance at Astor Bros. See "Once to Every Woman" at the Pastime Wednesday, April 6.

COUNCIL TO CONSIDER SALE OF PROPERTY TONIGHT.

Probably the most important matter of business to come before the City Council at its monthly meeting to be held this evening will be the matter of selling to the Washington Fire Company the lot upon which the Washington Opera House is built. This question has been up between the officers of the Fire Company and the Proposition and Grievances committee of council for the past month.

LOYD GEORGE IS THREATENED AS CRISIS IS FACED

Labor Factions of England United in Effort To Get Control of the Government.

London, April 4. — Great Britain faced today the greatest crisis since the call for the first 100,000 in 1914. With 1,200,000 coal miners on strike and industry already suffering from shortage of fuel, week-end meeting of the miners' allies showed a trend toward sympathetic strikes.

Labor's gesture was looked upon as a threat to force a general election and, if possible, seize control of the government.

The cabinet met today before the emergency session of Parliament opened. The government's plan for combatting the threatened attack on industries to be drafted.

The stubbornness of the battle was indicated by resolutions adopted by railway and transport workers. The men decided to support the miners "by any action deemed necessary."

Miners' leaders, admitting the seriousness of sabotage, asserted it was necessary and approved action of miners in withdrawing safety workers and flooding the pits.

Suffering already has resulted from the strike. The men who walked out added 1,200,000 to 1,500,000 already unemployed.

Statistics estimated 18,000,000 persons are affected by the strike. If railway and transport workers are added to the list the total will be increased 12,000,000.

HISTORY WILL REPEAT ITSELF.

A recurrence of the coal shortage witnessed in the fall of 1919 is inevitable. History will repeat itself.

Conditions at the present time in the coal market bears a very marked resemblance to conditions prevailing in the spring of 1919, following the termination of hostilities, there was a general let-down in industrial activities for a time. Every industry in the country has been moving at top speed. Every industry has been in high gear and it became necessary to change the gears. For a time there was a decided drop in the demand for coal from industrial sources. A mild winter was also a factor in decreasing the demand for coal. There was a falling market and no one would buy coal. Such a condition continued until late in the summer.

About the first of September, 1919, the country began to run short of fuel and the market began to rise. Buyers who ought to have known that such a contingency would arise but who had willfully procrastinated in the hope and belief that they could secure coal at almost any price they cared to pay were caught unawares and immediately began bidding against one another. The strike late in the year only served to aggravate the shortage.

At the present time no one is buying coal and little coal is being produced. Much more coal is being used than is coming from the mines. It is only a question of months before the present supply of coal in the markets of the nation will become exhausted.

The industrial consumer of coal often will not purchase his supplies of fuel on a falling market. Of course the average industrial consumer does not need much coal at the moment. He has enough on hand to meet current needs. His factories are running only part time. He feels that when he does need more coal he can yet it and that he can secure such a supply at any price he may see fit to pay.

In that he is mistaken. The industrial consumer of two years ago made the same mistake and was forced eventually to go into the market and buy coal at a fancy price in competition with other consumers who had been guilty of the same procrastination which cost him so dearly.

Of course when the demand is revived it is going to be revived with a rush. Every class of consumer is going to want coal all at once and it is going to be a physical impossibility to handle the volume of coal needed to take care of the country's needs.

The time to buy coal is now. The time to buy coal is when the price is down. It will reach no lower levels. Producers cannot sell it at prices now prevailing because such prices are below the cost of production. It is therefore the part of unwisdom for consumers to expect to secure their coal needs for the year at current prices even lower than those now most often heard of.—The Black Diamond.

JUDGE LINDSEY'S EXAMPLE.

According to a telegram from Denver, Judge Ben B. Lindsey of the juvenile court is to appear in the criminal court soon to hear the order for the execution of the sentence as the result of his conviction for contempt of court in refusing to divulge information given to him in confidence by a small boy, who was in his custody during a murder trial.

Judge Lindsey has announced that he would go to jail rather than pay the fine and has refused the offer of friends to pay the fine.

It is difficult to write with toleration and restraint of the judge who under the circumstances imposed a fine on Judge Lindsey. Judge Lindsey was judge of the juvenile court; he obtained the confidence of the boy because of the combined power of his personality and his position. That confidence should be sacred. The judge who attempts to compel Judge Lindsey to violate that confidence deserves himself to be driven from the bench and incarcerated in jail.

The confidence between a lawyer and a client, between a physician and a patient, between a priest and a penitent, is sacred in the eyes of the law. Yet this Denver judge holds that Judge Lindsey should betray the confidence of a lad, who, relying upon his official position and his spoken pledge, gave to him his confidence.

It would be destructive of the whole glorious work done by Judge Lindsey for him to violate the confidence of that boy; it would be destructive of the power for good of the juvenile court officials in every community for the man who first demonstrated the power for good of a juvenile court to betray the confidence of a lad who had trusted him.

The Herald would not contribute a cent to pay the fine imposed upon Judge Lindsey. It approves thoroughly and wholeheartedly his decision to go to jail rather than pay that fine or permit it to be paid. But it would contribute gladly to a fund to prosecute before the law or drive from his official position by the vote of the people the judge who imposed that fine and threatens to send Judge Lindsey to jail if it is not paid.

The power of imposing fines and imprisonment for contempt of court is a dangerous power—one that in the hands of an ignorant, prejudiced or corrupt judge can be grossly abused and used for pernicious purposes. It is but rarely that such power should be used, and it is a testimony to the judiciary of America—Federal and State alike—that it is not more often misused. The exhibition of the misuse of that power by the Denver judge will arrest national attention, and if that judge should send to jail all who have contempt for him there would have to be a jail built bigger than the whole state of Colorado.—Lexington Herald.

AS DOES THE GANDER SO MAY THE GOOSE.

It has been judicially determined by a Kentucky court that the legal right to smoke in public is not confined to the masculine. Woman may if she will and no policeman need feel called upon to interfere. As to the moral right no finding was made nor was there decision in the matter of manners. But fair play is on the side of the ladies even here. It need not be conceded save for argument's sake that smoking is either bad morals or bad manners, per se, as the lawyers put it technically. But even so, if a man may smoke morally so may a woman. In whatever place or circumstance it is within good manners for a man to smoke so it is for a woman. That is the logical sequence of the Kentucky finding.

The policeman who arrested the fair Blue Grass belle gracefully taking a few puffs following lunch in a fashionable restaurant—or refreshments in a cafe, as they call them even in Kentucky these prohibition times—justified his blue-law performance by registering a charge of disorderly conduct. The court found that the lady was perfectly in order under rules regulating masculine conduct, and as the law does not now distinguish sex the charge couldn't lie as merely against sex. The precedent is enlightening, but not conclusive. There are so many laws, and so many varying interpretations of most of them, that the policeman who isn't puzzled as to when he is or isn't properly proceeding under law is simply loafing on his job and letting them all go as far as they like.

A FROZEN CENTER OF POPULATION.

Like credit and other things, except, ice, in these times of abnormality the center of population seems in danger of becoming frozen. In the past decade it has move less than ten miles, almost due west. It bids fair to become stationary, if it does not even slip back eastward.

Since 1790 the center of population has zigzagged westward more than 500 miles from a point east of Baltimore to one west of Bloomington, Ind. Erratic as the ten-year jumps have been, their average tendency has been almost due west for 130 years.

Up to 1840, when the railroads were well begun, the average movement of the center was forty-one and five-tenths miles a decade. Then for fifty years the average ten-year move was more than seventy miles; in 1860 it was eighty. This period marks the winning of the West. In 1900 the movement had been fourteen and six-tenths miles. In 1910 it was thirty-nine miles. Now it is only nine and eight-tenths miles, a new low record.

But for the great growth of population in a single state, California, the center would already have begun retracing its steps. This pause in the westward course of empire is otherwise stated in the fact that for the first time the town and city population has passed the rural. It is an industrial age. And, let the Senate ask if it will what "we have to do with abroad," industries look to the seaboard, with a prudent eye on the markets of the world—New York World.

FLANDERS' FIELD POPPIES TO BE PLANTED IN KENTUCKY.

Lexington, Ky., April 2. — Poppies from "Flanders field" are to bloom in Kentucky, if a package of seed just received by Prof. C. W. Mathews, head of the Horticultural Department of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, bears fruit.

An effort is being made to establish the blood-red poppy that blooms in profusion over the bloody battle fields of Flanders in every state in the Union. The seed is being distributed by a Los Angeles nursery, whose President, while in France during the summer of 1919, conceived the idea of having a large quantity of the seed brought to America and the poppy established as a memorial to American soldiers who perished in Flanders.

RUSH FOR SUGAR.

Before Naming Your Executor

Think carefully of the disadvantages of naming an individual to act in that capacity. He is subject to every human misfortune, and your interests in his charge are imperiled accordingly. He may be inexperienced; he may prove incompetent or dishonest; he may be burdened with other duties; he may be absent when his presence is most needed; he may meet with an accident, become ill or mentally unbalanced; he will surely die, possibly soon.

This bank is better fitted to act as your executor than any individual. It performs its duties with intelligence, economy and fidelity because it is absolutely unbiased by any personal considerations and does its work with the combined training, ability and honesty of a number of men of proven character and successful business experience, and is surrounded by the strongest legal safeguards. We will gladly discuss with you the preparation of your will, no matter what the size of your estate.

PLENTY NAILS AND SUGAR NOW

New York Letter

By Lucy Jeanne Price

New York. — Even after all these years of sophistication, New York society simply cannot prevent itself from getting all keyed up about real princes and princesses. It has obtained considerable zest from the presence here this past season of various members of the nobility who were, nevertheless, quite a ways from being royalty. So now the news that the Princess Anastasia of Greece, formerly Mrs. Leeds of the U. S. A., will come to Newport for a part of the season, has sent social thrills down many spines. For her husband is of truly royal birth and brother to the present king. Everyone is getting out their former acquaintance with the one-time Mrs. Leeds and dusting it up all ready for use. It's going to be a pleasant occasion in more ways than one, it would be thought for the handsome woman who used to be half-snubbed by some of the present enthusiasts under the title of "tin-plate heiress."

Anyone who thinks music is unappreciated in "the commercial atmosphere of New York city" ought to have been among those present when William Mengelberg, Dutch conductor of the Concert Groebown set sail for Rotterdam the other day. The sceptical one would have realized then what true musical affection can mean. Six women fainted in the jam of the 2,000 gathered to say farewell, most of whom tried to kiss the overwhelmed conductor. He, himself, managed to escape injury, but he was sadly disarranged when he finally got safely aboard. His collar was missing completely, and his coat torn; but he knew that he was appreciated, at least.

The recent verdict in the case of a New York department store against a talking machine company is of general interest because of the contest which has sprung up at various times over the same principle of a manufacturer's being able to control the retail price of his product. R. H. Macy & Co. sued the talking machine concern because it has refused to sell the store its machines after they cut the price on them; charging violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. The jury in the Federal District Court awarded Macy & Co. $49,698.71 damages. The verdict will probably be appealed.

When you have a particularly silly dream, you need have no hesitancy in telling it. It isn't your fault how absurd it was; it may have come from Jupiter. So said Dr. Hereward Carrington, author and psychic investigator, in a speech the other day. Jupiter, he pointed out, is probably inhabited entirely by spirits; it's too far from the sun to have ordinary physical people go along on it. And these spirits "phone us, as it were, while we're asleep."

The race is not dying yet. A few hardy souls remain. For instance Edward Quinlan, of Brooklyn, fell from his window on the third story of a hospital; but instead of upsetting his nurse and everybody by getting himself killed or seriously injured, he hurt his wrist slightly and let it go at that.

Frankie Bailey is back on the "big time." How many years ago was it that she was a Weber and Fields favorite? So long, at least, that she had vanished from everyone's thoughts. And now she's back! She is to head a vaudeville company of eight, in a stunt put on by her old friends, Joe Weber and Lew Fields.

Are our readers properly grateful to us for having omitted all mention of the Stokes and Stillman divorce cases? You needn't be after all. Because we'll admit there was no temptation to do anything else.

UNCLE TED'S BED-TIME STORIES.

Americanism 113 Years Ago.

"Look, look, Uncle Ted! Look at what I found up in the attic!" It was Ruth speaking. She had bounded into the sitting room where Uncle Ted was reading the evening paper. She flew across the room and put something in her uncle's hand. "What is it," inquired Jack, from his seat on the further side of the room, where he was studying his lessons for the next day.

"It's an old history," replied his uncle, after glancing at the title page. "A history printed one hundred and thirteen years ago, for it has the date, 1808, on the title page. It was written by Samuel Whelpley, who was considered a very able writer in his day."

"And it has my great-grandfather's name in it," exclaimed Ruth, with her eyes sparkling as she danced around her uncle's chair. "Just think, my great-grandfather read that book and it has been in the family ever since. I found it in a trunk in the attic."

"I'd rather have a book just printed than one more than a hundred years old," remarked Jack, with some show of jealousy over the fact that Ruth had made the discovery.

"That depends upon what you want it for," replied Uncle Ted. "If you want a history for accurate information, of course the latest books are likely to be the best, for the authors of today have the most extensive sources of information at their command, but if you want a history for the purpose of getting the ideas of people who lived many years ago, the old histories are best. Also, I think, if you want a history written in stately, dignified language, with a vigorous expression of the opinion of the writers, you will find the old histories most satisfactory. I recollect that when I was in college I used Whelpley's history sometimes for reference reading, and was much impressed with his style. Also, I remember that he had some very strong opinions on the subject of immigration. I have forgotten just what he said, but I think I can find it in this book."

"To use this is not an American history, but 'A Compend of History from the Earliest Times.' It gives just one chapter to American history, and, of course, it does not undertake to give a detailed account of the settlement of this continent and its development. Yes, here is the place where he wrote about immigration. Now remember, this was written before 1808, for the book was printed that year. When this book was written there were only about 6,000,000 people in the United States, and there were only 17 states in the Union. There had been only three presidents, Washington, Adams and Jefferson. I'm going to read a few sentences from this old book:

"No government was ever more benevolent or liberal to foreigners, than that of the United States. It has held out to them the greatest encouragements; nor has it disappointed their expectations. . . . It is not unlikely, however, that the future historian will be compelled to say that our government, in relation to foreigners, erred through excess of benevolence and urbanity. . . . Though many worthy characters are found in so great an emigration as has been to this country, yet, for the most part, they are poor, distressed, overwhelmed with calamities, discontented, oppressed by the tyranny of their government, and more commonly by their own vices or imprudence. . . . Every foreigner, soon after his arrival in this country, by a course neither circuitous, expensive, nor long, becomes a citizen in the fullest sense. He immediately becomes a politician—is profound in the science of government—is able to set all things right. . . . He declaims against oppression, flames with zeal for liberty, and seldom fails to be at the head or tail of innovations and reform, perhaps of insurrection."

"Now, children, those things written in 1808 might very truthfully have been written in 1918. There are now, as there were then, a lot of good characters among the immigrants. You know Mr. Nelson, the man whose farm we visited out South of town last Sunday—there couldn't be a better citizen. There is the Schultz family—one of them owns the dairy farm where we saw the fine Holstein cattle, and another of the family is president of the bank on Main street. Such people as they are, and people like Mr. Kelly, who was chief of police when your father was mayor, are a good sort of people to have come to this country. But it is just as our old historian Whelpley said more than a hundred years ago, there are a lot of foreigners who never enjoyed liberty or good government or prosperity in their native lands but who want to reform and run this government before they have learned to speak our language."

"That kind of people organize political societies composed chiefly of foreigners and try to create dissatisfaction and discontent. One of them came here and tried to overturn our government but finally went to Russia and helped organize the bolshevik government there. I'm glad he went. Emma Goldman was another of the same kind, and our government sent her back to Russia, but she soon admitted that the United States is a better place to live, even if she did curse the country all the time she was here."

"Nowhere is what Whelpley said in this old history. 'No person should hereafter become a citizen but by being born within the United States. Let foreigners find in this country an asylum of rest—an escape from oppression. Here let them buy and build and plant—let them spread and flourish, pursuing interest and happiness in every mode of life which enterprise can suggest or reason justify, and let them be exonerated from the toils of government. If we make good laws, they will share the benefit—if bad ones, the blame will not be theirs. Let their children born among us become citizens by birthright.'

"I hardly think I would go as far as Whelpley advised, but he was nearer right than our present system. A foreigner should at least be here long enough to learn our language and customs before becoming a citizen, and if he does not care enough to learn our language within a reasonable time, he should be sent back home. The best remedy, however, is to make the laws strict enough so that the trouble makers will never get into this country."

"I think I remember some other interesting things in that old history, Ruth, and if you will keep it down here in the book shelves, I will tell you some more about it some other time."

BUSINESS MEN URGED TO WORK WITH HOOVER

Meets Committee of Chamber of Commerce and Seeks Cooperation of Industry.

Washington, D. C. — Plans to bring about a closer relationship between the Department of Commerce and various branches of business were discussed at a conference attended by Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce and several of the Directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. It is Mr. Hoover's hope that definite results will be accomplished which will prove of great benefit in the expansion of foreign commerce and efficiency in industry. The Chamber of Commerce will name a committee to cooperate with Mr. Hoover, and it is proposed, as part of the program, to name an Advisory Board to the department, which will include representatives of business, agriculture and labor. Mr. Hoover made the following statement at the conclusion of the conference:

"At the conference between a portion of the Directors of the United States Chamber of Commerce and myself, discussed at length ways and means of organizing a definite relationship of the Department of Commerce with the different branches of business."

"The Chamber of Commerce will appoint a small committee to co-operate with me and such commercial and industrial organizations as are also concerned, in order that a small initial Advisory Board to the department may be selected which will represent the different elements of American business."

"It is proposed to include representatives of agriculture and labor on this board, because our national problems with which this department deals do not concern the manufacturer, exporter and ship owner alone, but also our laborer and farmer."

By bringing about this kind of co-operation Mr. Hoover hopes to make the Department of Commerce a vital organization in the advancement of export trade.

Throughout the United States there are 12,000 villages of less than 2,500 inhabitants each.

A CRITICAL SITUATION.

Washington, D. C. — "Once more the nation is confronted by a critical transportation situation—a situation that demands the thoughtful attention of all the people," admonishes the Republican Publicity Association, through its President, Hon. Jonathan Bourne, Jr. "Directly, there is a controversy between railroad companies and their employees over the question of wages. Indirectly the issue affects all the people of the country, for every seller or buyer of goods and every traveler is affected by the costs of railroad operation. The patrons of the railroads pay the wages."

"As every one knows there was an increase in railroad wages in 1916 by governmental order after the railroad brotherhoods had threatened to strike if their demands were not met by a certain day and hour. In response to the urgent recommendation of President Wilson, the Adamson Act was passed by a Democratic Congress and Mr. Wilson signed it, using four different pens which were presented to the heads of the four brotherhoods as mementoes of their victory over the government. Later, under government operation of the roads, wages were increased from time to time, and the scale of compensation remained at the government figure when the roads were turned back to private management. There have been adjustments in wage scales in most large employing concerns but none in railroad employment for the reason that the law provides for certain conferences, appeals, hearings and formal decisions by a board. The railroads propose a reduction of salaries and wages, from top to bottom, with equitable adjustments which make allowance for differences in rates of increase under governmental orders. In support of their proposal, the railroad managers cite the fact that there have been adjustments in other lines of employment, and that government statistics show that a large proportion of the railroad mileage of the country is now operating at a loss."

"If this were a question between the railroad owners and railroad employees alone, the public could afford to sit quiescent and await the outcome. But the public is the party to the controversy most vitally affected, and, therefore, most extensively interested. Needless to remark, the public is and always has been willing to pay a fair and equitable wage and to have the employees work under proper conditions. But on the other hand, the public is entitled to have wages and working conditions adjusted if out of harmony with wages and conditions in other lines of industry or enterprise. Whether the compensations of railroad employees, if continued on a war-time basis, are out of proportion to wages in industries that have gone through a readjustment, is a question to be discussed and in the discussion public opinion will be a large if not a controlling factor."

"The railway wage increases began with an arbitrary raise granted in pursuance of an act of Congress, and not through so-called 'collective bargaining.' The chosen representatives of the public authorized the arbitrary increase without the consent of the employees. The employees can hardly justify themselves, therefore, in complaining at an arbitrary decrease in corresponding degree without their consent."

"The situation presented is a critical one—one that will not wait indefinitely for remedies. Many of the railroads are well on the way to receiverships if not bankruptcy. The suggestion of the leaders of the four brotherhoods that any change in wage scales can come only after extended hearings—meaning long delay—is one that will not find much support outside of the offices of the brotherhoods."

The public is entitled to continuous transportation service at a scale of compensation on a par with that realized by other enterprises, and, whatever the procedure the public will expect reasonably rapid action."

ENDORSED AT HOME.

Such Proof as This Should Convince Any Maysville Citizen.

The public endorsement of a local citizen is the best proof that can be produced. None better, none stronger can be had. When a man comes forward and testifies to his fellow-citizens, addresses his friends and neighbors, you may be sure he is thoroughly convinced or he would not do so. Telling one's experience when it is for the public good is an act of kindness that should be appreciated. The following statement given by a resident of Maysville adds one more to the many cases of Home Endorsement which are being published about Doan's Kidney Pills. Read it.

D. S. Stout, 22 East Second street, Maysville, says: "Just after my recovery from pneumonia, my kidneys began to give me trouble. My back had a steady dull ache and it hurt me to breathe. My eyes would get puffy underneath. I knew my kidneys were in bad shape and something would have to be done to check the disorder so I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and began using them. It didn't take long to rid me of my trouble. I take pleasure in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills."

The name of one Sunday school visitor that of Mr. J. H. Kirkland, was omitted from the list published last week. Mr. Kirkland came in just time to fill in two important schools — Plumville and Bethany.

The following persons donated the use of their automobiles to carry out speakers: H. Carr Pollitt, J. Albert Hill, John Fansler, Geo. W. Royse, Frank Jolly, J. L. Markwell and Ben H. Greenlee. Through the kindness of the gentlemen the visitation was made without any cost to the association.

They are entitled to a special vote of appreciation for their generosity. Sunday school "Visitation Day" proved a big success. The day was ideal and early in the morning the crowds of "three-minute" speakers began to form and start for the county. Every known school in the county was visited, the speakers receiving a hearty and enthusiastic welcome at each and every school. The splendid attendance at the county schools shows the interest they took in the visitation.

Large goals were set by all school for Go-To-Sunday-School-Day and all agreed to do their share in raising the budget for county and state work. Not only was the work of the Sunday schools presented in an attractive way, but the appeal of the China famine was laid upon the heart and consciences of every school. Reports during the afternoon to the Attendance Secretary were that the speakers did the schools much good for which they are duly appreciative. It is the belief of the County Association that Mason county is on the forward move and that we are due for the greatest "Go-To-Sunday-School-Day" that we have ever had.

The next big day in the Sunday school campaign is "Family Day" which is next Sunday. In every school the effort will be made to line up every member of every family in any way connected with the school. Bring along the cradle roll babies, the home department and all. Let us make "Family Day" a good one.

One of the early moves of the County Sunday School Association will be the getting of the district organizations to work in proper order. This matter will be taken up and acted upon at the first meeting of the executive committee. The county schools seem anxious to begin and it goes without question that much good can be done at district meetings.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Gooding left town this afternoon for Winston-Salem, N. C., where Mr. Gooding will be in the interest of the Reynolds Tobacco Company.
